RICHLANDTOWN—Richland supervisors have refused to allow the railroad company to close the Palestown road. Considerable opposition has been aroused and the matter will probably be taken to the Public Service Commission for final decision.

Couple Surprised On Their Golden Wedding Anniversary

A very happy scene took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wink in Bristol Township, Pa., on Tuesday evening, when, in honor of their golden wedding anniversary, they were happily surprised by a group of one hundred and twenty relatives and friends bursting in upon them with heartiest congratulations and best wishes for many more happy anniversary occasions.

The evening was enjoyably spent with music by the combined orchestra of Tullytown and Emille churches, and special vocal selections. The congratulatory address was made by Rev. W.
A. Smith, of New Hope, Pa., a former pastor. This address was responded to in a most fitting manner by the happy bride of this occasion.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wink are well known and highly respected residents of this township and active officials and workers of the Emille M. E.
Church, where they are held in the highest esteem. They were the recipients of many valuable and useful gifts including over sixty dollars in gold.

Guests were present from Philadelphia, Tullytown, Emille and other points, and after partaking of refreshments of ice cream and cake all departed at a late hour wishing this happy couple many more golden pleasures in the future.

REGULAR REPUBLICANS WIN IN EVERY WARD EXCEPT THIRD; WINTER NOMINATED FOR COUNCIL IN FIRST WARD BY 8 VOTES; GILKESON IS DEFEATED BY MAJORITY OF 95 IN SECOND WARD

Spezzano Is Nominated in Fifth Ward on Both Republican and Democratic Tickets—Nevegold Loses in Sixth Ward in Contest for Registration and Real Estate Assessor to Walter A. Fagan by Substantial Vote

The regular Republicans seeking nomination on the party ballot won in every district in Bristol Borough, at the Primary yesterday with the exception of the candidate for Council in the Third Ward. Richard T. Myers, the firemen's candidate, was victorious over Maurice B. Keating by a majority of 122 votes.

In the first ward, John F. Smoyer, the firemen's candidate and present incumbent in Borough Council, was defeated by Clarence W. Winter, the regular Republican candidate, by eight votes.

Joseph R. Grundy was nominated for Borough Council in the second ward over Franklin Gilkeson by a majority of 95 votes.

In the fifth ward, Frank M. Spezzano, the regular Republican nominee, won over Herbert A. Pettitt, by 48 votes. Spezzano was also nominated by the Democrats in this district.

In the sixth ward, Raymond W.
Nevegold, candidate for Assessor, was defeated by Walter A. Fagan by a majority of 182 votes. In the contest for Registration Assessor in the first precinct of the sixth ward, Fagan defeated Nevegold by a majority of 91
votes.

The total vote polled in Bristol
Borough was the largest on record for a Primary Election and the overwhelming victory scored by the regular Republicans is considered as an endorsement for the administration of Burgess Clifford L. Anderson.

The local contest, while keenly fought, was conducted in an orderly manner and no disturbances were reported.
More than 3500 ballots were cast and there was keen interest in the contest. Groups of individuals were gathered about the polling places

throughout the day.

All of the contest centered chiefly in the Republican party. Joseph Duffy, candidate for County Commissioner on the Democratic ballot received 401
votes in Bristol Borough for that position.

In the contest for nominations of candidates for School Board, Louise L. Fabian and Jacob H. Young, present incumbents, were renominated.
Mrs. Fabian received a total of 1837 votes, Mr. Young 1732, both for six year terms. Joseph H. Spencer, candidate for the same office for the same term received 1438 votes. Mrs. Elizabeth Gillis, candidate for a two year term as school director received a total of 1761 votes.

KEEPER OF NOTORIOUS HOUSE GIVEN SENTENCE

Inmates Are Ordered to Leave County and Fine Is Imposed

PALZER IS ACQUITTED

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 21.—"Get out of Bucks County at once and stay out;
such people are not wanted in this county," was the order given yesterday to two women convicted several months ago in the criminal court before Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, Pa., of being inmates of a house of ill repute located in Hill-town township and operated by a man and his wife.

A new trial in the case was recently refused and four defendants in the case appeared before Judge Shull yesterday for sentence.

Lawrence Gilbert, who with his wife, operated the place, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to two months in the Bucks County Prison.
Mrs. Clara Gilbert, his wife, was fined $100 and costs and a prison sentence was suspended upon condition that she cease the operation of place.
Judge Shull warned Mrs. Gilbert that if she was caught operating again in Bucks County she would be brought into court and sentenced on the original conviction.

Peggy Helsel and Jessie Wiley, who lived at the Gilbert place, were each fined $25 and costs and ordered to get out of Bucks County and stay out.
The Court told them that such characters were not wanted in Bucks County.

Judge Shull yesterday refused to grant a parole in the case of Ira Treat, of New Jersey, who was convicted before him several months ago and sentenced to serve from one to two years in the Bucks County Prison. The Court held the case under advisement but stated that no parole would be granted at this time.

John L. DuBois, of Doylestown, attorney for Treat, who presented the petition for parole, pleaded with the Court to grant the parole because of the fact that Treat has a lawful wife and a young child, both needy of his support.

"That condition may be true, and that fact they are worthy of his support makes me feel as though the punishment should not be made easier," Judge Shull remarked. "Personally, of course, we are sorry for the wife and child, but Treat should have thought of them at the time the offense was committed."

George Palzer, of 1012 Wallace street, Philadelphia, and a former resident of Pineville, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in Court No. 1 before Judge William C. Ryan of a charge of involuntary manslaughter. The jury directed that the county pay the costs
in the case.

In the trial, Palzer was represented
by Webster S. Achey, of Doylestown.
Last week the grand jury ignored a bill against Palzer charging him with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Palzer was operating his automobile on August 10 on the Feasterville and Churchville pike when George White, aged 21, a boarder at the Palzer home in Philadelphia, who was drunk and riding in the rear of the car with his head extended out the side, was killed when the Palzer car
and another car operated by Mrs.
Samuel B. Carey, of 10 West Center avenue, Newtown, sideswiped each other on an abrupt curve in the highway.

The Commonwealth witnesses were heard yesterday morning. Among them was Dr. E. E. Pownall, of Richboro, who examined Palzer a short time after the accident. The doctor said that at the time of examination he made the remark that "I can vouch that Palzer has not been drinking, but is very much excited." About an hour later the doctor again examined Palzer and

THE VACATION DELUSION

Another popular theory has been exposed as a delusion. A French writer vehemently refutes the common supposition that the way to rest is to do something else, to spend a day or a week doing anything that one does not do the rest of the year. This, he says, is only "getting tired another way."

Instead of a theater or dance after a day of toil, this investigator into the causes and remedies for fatigue recommends repose, sleep, solitude, quiet and inertia. The rest cure he advocates for the tired business man is not golf, motoring, a sea voyage of two weeks at a shore resort. For such, if they really desire rest and recuperation and not merely a vacation, he prescribes a retreat far from the crowd; devoid of activity, the society of others and other disturbing influences.

Of course he is right. And the truth of the matter is that his theory has always been put to practical use. People who go away to rest don't delude themselves into thinking they obtain that needed reconstruction of mind and body by participating in sports and mingling with the mob. They seek out some quiet nook and strive with as little effort as possible to see, hear, speak and do as little as possible.

No time is more propitious than the present for removing some misunderstanding of that great American institution, the vacation. Though it destroy the institution itself, the pronouncement is here issued that the vacation is no longer used as a rest-cure and is not necessary as such to the average worker. If there was ever a time when people went on vacations to rest after their labors, they now return from their vacations to rest after their labors.

AM! A TRAFFIC WAND

The traffic officer, who, in upholding the weary arm of the law where the rush never subsides, adopts a rolled newspaper as a sort of scepter in directing the ebb and flow at its flowingest, demonstrates the need for added equipment for those whose duty it is to tell traffic where it may go and when.

A kingly gesture of the hand and arm becomes wearisome after the hundredth repetition, and, besides, it is much more effective to wave a definite object than merely to wave. Crowds at parades wave hats and flags, and at ball games wave pennants and programs. Why should not the policeman have something to wave? His club is too heavy, inartistic and inconspicuous. A white handkerchief would be out of harmony with his masculinity, and a flag of any color might result in traffic confusion.

The ideal article would be a wand or baton, perhaps, similar to that with which the orchestra conductor threatens his basses and woos his woodwinds. By day it could be of white enamel and bejeweled and by night it might be tipped with one of those alert little terminal bulbs as a crowning refinement of light and beauty.

Armed with such a striking device, the traffic policeman might sway pedestrians and drivers like the conductor sways his orchestra individually and collectively. Something must be done to keep the eyes of traffic upon the palm of the policeman in the middle of the street and off the knees of the girl at the curb.

The manager of beauty shows says the contestants are beautiful but dumb. Dumb belles, we assume.

SYNOPSIS
Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America to follow Emmett Murtough, to whom she is betrothed. Neither Kildare nor Murtough hold steady jobs and Sheila works as a waitress. Her only friends are the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer, whose kindness interests her. Murtough joins a band of bootleggers and, influenced by a cabaret girl, reveals a plan to move $150,000 worth of contraband. He enlists with the rivals to betray the hiding place.

"Listen, I understand, from what we have learned about you, that you and this little girl are good friends—in fact, you'd both like to get married and get a good start in a business world while. Well, here's your chance. Do this one job and you've got the money to marry and to settle down in a legitimate business. It's a chance not many fellows get in this game," he added. "How about it?"

"And if you don't want to play that way, we'll turn you up to Clocker within an hour," Murtough did not realize that if they did, it would tip off their own plans. He sat dumbly for several minutes, then threw out his hands and said: "All right. You win and I'll square with you; but it's the first crooked deal I ever put over."

They decided that Murtough had better sleep in the apartment there until time to get up and drive to the Long Island rendezvous. Another inner bedroom connected with that occupied by Schermer, and Murtough was assigned to that. There was no door leading to the hall and the window was seven stories above the street. Murtough sat himself down to reflections on the gift of eternal silence.

"You and Emmett Murtough engaged!"

CHAPTER XI

Planning the "Double-Cross"

Sheila had not seen Rory O'Shea since his victory over Campeau at the Garden. She had avoided Mrs. O'Shea, too, because she felt that she might be embarrassed if she visited Rory's mother, and he were to be home when she called. She felt instinctively that Rory admired her even though she had not heard from him directly during his stay at the training camp. Memory of the long automobile ride brought back many pleasant recollections of this becoming young man, but now that she had given her word definitely to Emmett Murtough she felt she must put such thoughts from her.

Rory had called at the Kildare apartment one night but Sheila was not at home and Old Tom did not encourage him to stay until she returned from her work at the restaurant. Rory had settled his affairs with Jack Reegan and had in his wallet a check for $1750 more than he had expected. It was eight o'clock and he decided to have supper at Nick's. He selected a table, which he thought would be served by Sheila, so that he might chat with her. He lingered over his meal in order to get a word with her now and then, and when Sheila brought her own supper he beckoned to her to lay it at his table.

"I've missed you, Miss Kildare, these two months," he said. "Ah, ye had no time to think of me, what with all the training ye had to do," she replied with a smile.

"It was thinking of you that helped me to get into shape to win. I thought a lot about you while I was away. I didn't know you had come to work and that Old Tom had quit Tim. I'm sorry for that."

"The work didn't suit my father," she said in defense of him. "Work of any kind that is honest ought not to hurt anybody," he retorted.

"I didn't say it hurt him."

"Well, it ought to suit him then."

Truth to tell, Rory had seen through Old Tom and his mighty pretensions. "It's a shame you have to be doing this."

"Any kind of work that's honest enough to suit anybody," she replied, paraphrasing his own words.

"But not for a girl like you."

"Oh, it's been all right. Nick's not so bad to work for, after ye know yer job."

"I just settled for the fight and it's a right good nest egg I've got left, more than I expected out of it. Reegan is a fair manager all right."

"And will ye be keeping up yer fighting? Yer mother says she'd like to have you quit."

"Oh, mother's been saying that all these years, but she wants me to do what is best. I don't know yet," he went on seriously. "I stood up well in the fight with Campeau, but these young fellows have got something that I lost when I was a kid at the game. I've about come to the conclusion that I'm through."

"An' ye'll not fight any more? Oh, that would be grand!"

"Would you care, Sheila?"

"Of course, I'd care. Why, I think it would be wonderful if you could get into business yourself or with yer brother, Tim, just like ye talked that day."

"You remember then our ride? I wondered if you did. I was very happy that day."

"It was beautiful, the sunset an' all," mused Sheila.

"I'd like to take you again, some time. And, how about the West End Club's big shindig, the dance, I mean. Will you go with me?"

He asked, his eyes bright with anticipation. "We'll have a great time."

"I'm sorry but I've already promised Emmett."

"Oh," and the hit in Rory's voice faltered.

"You see, he asked me some time ago."

"But I couldn't. I was away."

"An' I told him yes. Will you be coming?"

"Oh, I always take Mother and Dad. They know all the old timers, the real old timers, you know, and it gives them a chance to meet them again. They wouldn't miss it for anything."

"Then I'll see you."

"And will you dance with me?"

"Of course, I will."

After Sheila had finished they walked slowly homeward and went down as far as the new steamship docks, where they could see the lights on an ocean going vessel that was moored there waiting to sail on the next day. The New Jersey shore was alive with the glimmering lights of automobiles and trolley cars.

"There's some mighty nice flats a bit farther north there," remarked Rory. "I know some friends who live over there. Once it wanted the folks to move over there, but they like the neighborhood they've been living in. The rents are nearly as cheap as here and the streets are clean and there are trees and grass on the lawns in front of the smaller houses. It's nice for young couples just starting out."

"It would be nice for Emmett an' me, wouldn't it? Emmett's so changed now an' he says he has a fine chance."

"You and Emmett Murtough engaged?"

"Well, we had planned it a long, long time ago, and when he changed fer the better I agreed."

Rory said no more on the way home and his silence embarrassed Sheila into silence also. At the door where they parted Rory said: "Well, I'll see you at the dance."

"Oh, of course. Give my love to yer mother."

Sheila turned up the stairs, but it seemed to Rory, who listened to her footfalls, that her feet must have turned to lead.

At the West End Club there was much talk and planning of the coming dance. All the active workers of the district had been enlisted to do their share to make it a huge success. Clocker took advantage of the fact that most of his men were there to call them into meeting, and he told them of his plans to transport the entire shipload of contraband on the following Sunday night. Enough trucks would be furnished to do the job, and he appointed Dixon in charge and Devlin first lieutenant in the enterprise. It was their business to learn how many vehicles would be required, to obtain the services of drivers and guards and to schedule the routes over which each truck should speed to New York.

"I'll take Murtough with me if it's all right," said Devlin. "He appears to be a pretty handy fellow."

He stood up all right in that trouble we had with Stevens," commented Dixon. "I think he's a good man."

"I'll speak to him then; he ought to be in later."

Murtough did not come in. At that very hour he was crouching in the underbrush outside of Clocker's storage house on Long Island with Schermer and his two companions.

CHEVROLET IS TESTED
THREE MILLION MILES

Three million miles of testing! In that sensational record lies a new explanation for the phenomenal success of the Chevrolet Motor Company, which has consistently shattered all previous high marks for the manufacture and sale of gear shift cars every month so far this year.

Three years ago this month Chevrolet first began using the facilities of the great General Motors proving grounds at Milford, Michigan, to develop and perfect its product, and in that time three million miles have been piled up by Chevrolet test cars, it was announced today by O. E. Hunt, chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

"An average of twelve Chevrolet test cars are constantly on view at the proving grounds, plying the steep inclines, ploughing through the deep sand or mud roads, testing speed and endurance on the track, or undergoing any one of many severe trials that a car is put through at this veritable 'sweat shop' for automobiles," explained Mr. Hunt.

"Each test car is driven about three months and in that time totals from 30,000 to 50,000 miles. While many cars are driven farther, the average is probably not higher because that distance is sufficient to prove any new mechanical feature we may have under observation, or to reveal any fault that may require correction.

"After a car attains this mileage it is taken to our experimental laboratory and there dismantled under the supervision of skilled engineers. Every part is tested and inspected, all evidences of wear are noted, and if any detail is not as it should be, we get to work immediately developing a new part or process to replace the old. The new feature is then built into an entirely new car—or three new cars if the operation is vital—and this car in turn goes through the rigid rites of the proving grounds and then to the laboratory. This cycle continues until we have arrived at the proper solution of every problem.

"A competent field staff handles the cars at the proving grounds, and practically every day two or more engineers from my department go to Milford to check up on the work there, note the condition of the test cars, drive them, and see that all operations adhere rigidly to instructions.

"Since September, 1924, when we first started using the proving grounds, we have put an average of one million miles a year on the test cars there.

"Every car at the proving grounds undergoes all the tests that any car would be called on to perform in normal driving, as well as many 'torture' tests designed to bring out any fault that might develop at the hands of an inexperienced or careless driver. Each test car is subjected to such abuses as riding the clutch, constant tramping on the brake, racing a cold motor, straining the engine in high gear, etc.—not because this is done by the majority of motorists, but that so the car will stand up under the severest treatment.

"Despite this rigorous service, the test cars still have many thousands of miles under their hoods when we retire them. We take them in at 30,000 to 50,000 miles simply because at that distance any faults will have developed, and further running would be a waste of time.

"That the public recognizes the tremendous importance of the experimental work that precedes the offering of any new Chevrolet feature is amply proven by our extraordinary production and sales records."

It was then that he said "I smelled liquor on his breath."

In the accident White was killed instantly, death being due to a fractured skull. Some time after the accident a coroner's jury held Palzer for the action of the grand jury.

In defense, Mrs. George Palzer, who was riding with her husband in the front seat of the car, testified that her husband tried to avoid the collision by pulling away from the Carey car and that he applied his brakes. She said they were going about twenty-five miles an hour.

In rebuttal, District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn called Patrolman Martin E. Deshler, of Edison, who investigated the accident.

The District Attorney asked the patrolman: "You heard Palzer testify that at no time, in fact never, have I taken a drink of liquor. What condition do you believe Palzer to have been in that night?"

"In my opinion, Palzer was considerably under the influence of liquor," answered Patrolman Deshler. "I smelled liquor on his breath and he acted as though he was drunk."

The jury deliberated less than one hour and returned a verdict of not guilty and placed the costs on the county.

Before adjournment yesterday, a jury was drawn and one witness heard in the case of John S. Applegate, of Trenton, N. J., charged with felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods from the store of Arthur Worthington, at Yardley on the early morning of February 23, 1927. Eight tires and $2.20 in money were stolen. The tires were returned. Two other youths arrested in the case were before the court several months ago.

In the trial, Applegate is represented by John L. DuBois, of Doylestown, and Ernest H. Glickman, of Trenton and Morrisville.

Arthur Worthington, of Roelofs, testified that he conducts a tire and accessory store in Yardley. He said that he was not at the store the day before the robbery and that from his own knowledge could not say what was in the store the day before. He said that the eight stolen tires had been returned to the store before he arrived the morning after the robbery. He said that he knew that $2.20 in money had been stolen.

Edward J. Brewer, of Yardley, an electrical engineer and bank watchman, was called by the Commonwealth. He said that he heard a noise

BILLY'S UNCLE

In front of the store and saw an automobile with a New Jersey license.

"Being newsy, I started to look about," testified Brewer. "I thought perhaps there was a plot under way to rob the bank. I saw three men and then sent in a fire alarm. As the whistle sounded, I saw three men run from the store with tires, toss them in an automobile and beat it. I secured the license number of the car, 'M-28661,' but could not identify the men."

Bensalem Church Plans For Cafeteria Supper

Bensalem Methodist Church is planning for the cafeteria supper which will be served next Saturday, from 4:30 to 7:30 p. m., daylight saving time. Among the delicious home-made goodies will be vegetable soup, chicken-noodle soup, chicken salad, potato salad, cottage cheese, succotash, lemon butter, apple sauce, pies of all varieties, cakes and other good things to eat.

There will likewise be other attractions, namely: Flower and vegetable markets, fancy table, Colonial clothes basket, home-made candies and ice cream parlor.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 21 (I.N.S.)—Richard C. Haldeman, president of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, today issued a statement commending the State Department of Highways for the manner in which detours were marked during the present construction season.

Marking detours has always been a subject of considerable difficulty with the Department and one which resulted in a great deal of criticism from some quarters.

During the present season all detours were marked with the route numbers of which they were a temporary part. This plan, Haldeman said, helped tourists keep the proper road.

DEMPSEY CONFIDENT OF WINNING BY KNOCKOUT

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor
CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Jack Dempsey says he will win by a knockout in the fourth round.

"Bet the shirt on me this time; I'm right," was Dempsey's tip to the little half-literate Greek who has made a god of the man he has rubbed and laved and petted and slapped into condition or out. Crusee and his man Friday live again in the persons of this pair and Dempsey would rather lose his index finger than cross this loyal soul, born to be a bootblack but fated to bask in the reflected glory of an ex-champion of the heavyweights.

"Jerry, I'm set," Dempsey added. "You have been loyal and true to me and I want you to cash. I know in my heart that I can't miss this one."

This may or may not be the ravings of the usual passe athlete who never knows the truth about himself until that truth is the jest of every bar room. It may be the story of a prematurely aged man who knows himself less than he knows the countless thousand casuals who persist in gladdening him. As to that, I cannot say.

Dempsey so declared himself yesterday when he returned from his run on the road. The declaration was made to Meremath Luvadis, the big massage and witch hazel man from the locker room, and although the writer admits he wasn't hiding under the Persian rug for the occasion, a transcript of the testimony was given me by a mutual friend who happened to be present.

However, I can say and I will that Dempsey called up intimate friends before the Sharkey fight and gave them the same tip—to go on him until the elastic was worn thin. They did and he cashed their bets for them.

However, Dempsey's opinion is something else compared with what he may feel or what he may do. But he thinks he's set.

"I'll get him before the fourth round," Dempsey has told close friends. "As a matter of fact I may get him earlier. What I am figuring on doing is to go in there and start slugging. If I miss I'll go out. If Gene misses, he'll go out. It's all very simple."

And what about a foul?

Well, they have had foul punches in "big shots" before and perhaps it will be no novelty to have one now. Anyhow the referee will be picked today by the boxing commission and the general understanding is that Dave Miller cannot go wrong. He has handled the big fights here, he has the backing of Mayor William Hale Thompson and he happens to be a man who knows what it is all about.

His only contestant is Emil Thiry, who is older than last winter's boot. Emil just can't get around and David can, does and will.

Even though the referee situation remains undecided Dempsey admirers, flocking here on every train, are showing willingness—aye eagerness—to get their money down on the ex-champion. The result has been that in the last twenty-four hours there has been a revision of the betting odds.

The odds are down to 6 to 5 now, with Tunney the favorite, and there is some wagering at even money. In fact, according to hotel lobby gossip, there is great wads of Dempsey coin going begging. Chicago betting commissioners were asserting that by the time the men enter the ring, Dempsey may be the favorite. The Dempsey betters, however, were insisting on 6 to 5 odds this morning. Palmer House Bill Ryan said he had been commissioned to get $40,000 at those odds. It was reported that Herbert G. Shimp, Chicago turfman, acting for Kansas City friends, has received $50,000 to wager on Dempsey.
